BACK TO THE FARM.

An undesirable factor in the increased cost of living in this section of Pennsylvania has been the falling off in farm products. The United States Department of Agriculture, in a recent bulletin dealing with the crops of Pennsylvania with twenty other states where agricultural output between 1890 and 1909 shows a decrease over that of the previous decade. In Pennsylvania the reduction in farm acreage was 8.5% and in yield 2.7%.

The Harrisburg Telegraph in commenting on these conditions says that the failure to keep up the production is due to the failure of the farmers to keep abreast of the times, in failure to fertilize, in robbery of the soil by tenants who have no interest in the future of the farm, but are concerned only about their share in today's profits and in numerous other conditions which are not incapable of being remedied if earnest and united effort were put forward to do so.

The Washington Courier says the farms of that county are not what they used to be but that this is due to the fact that the original or present owners have sold their land and removed to the centers of population and the number of farms being filled by tenants is greater today perhaps than at any time in the history of that county. This is undoubtedly having an effect in showing decreased production on the farms.

In Fayette county, not only was the coal sold from under many of the farms years ago, but in a large measure it has been worked out. This process has left down portions of the surface and for the time made the land unfit for farming or anything else. The smoke from the coke ovens, too, has had a deleterious effect on crops. While much of Fayette county's agricultural land has thus been put temporarily out of cultivation, it is gradually coming back under cultivation with its produce is good except at times.

But the except Fayette county offices are not available in other portions. Fayette county is a small patch in the Pennsylvania farm. It furnishes one exception to the rule, but the rule holds good. The Pennsylvania farmers do not farm enough. The high cost of living will remain high as long as the fat soil of our state is indifferently and unprofitably farmed.

THE SAND PATCH TUNNEL.

The blockading of the Baltimore & Ohio and Pith tunnel would have paralyzed the whole system before the building of the Belmont branch connecting Connellsville with the main line westward. As it is it puts a serious hindrance upon the business of the road by making it necessary to detour the trains a considerable distance further around. The Western Maryland, with a courtesy common only to modern railroad management, is taking some treacherous trains through its tunnel into Cumberland, thus relieving the situation materially.

The Connellsville tunnel has been unfortunate with its tunnels. The Pitherton tunnel was once partly destroyed by fire and put out of commission for several years. There was no other outlet near or far and the system was blocked until several miles of railroad could be hastily thrown around Pitherton. Tunnel construction in those days, however, was very crude compared with modern craftsmanship. Concrete work was unknown and many of the mountain holes were roofed with the natural rock or timber. Brick work was rare. A modern Sand Patch would perhaps have made Sand Patch safe.

The collapse of the tunnel, however, emphasized the wisdom of the railroad's arrangement in providing a second tunnel at Sand Patch. The only unfortunate thing about it is that it was not in time. If it were more than the Baltimore & Ohio traffic would in power be increased.

The death of General William C. Clegg, Jr., has taken one of the veterans from the ranks of West Penn's men in journalism. General Clegg was not only a distinguished newspaper man, but he was also a highly educated man. He had them by these attributes a position of honor and he will be missed.

COAL COMPANY MUST PAY.

Meadow Lands Plum, in Washington Court, to file by Agreement.

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 10.—It is opinion yesterday that the Meadow Lands Coal Company will have to pay J. G. Morrison the agreed purchase price of $3,000 an acre for 95 acres, less $300 on the whole price. Morrison and the company entered into an agreement whereby the company was to purchase the 95-acre farm at $3,000 an acre and the company paid $1,000 of the money in Morrison and began to mine the coal. Mining was continued until salt was brought by Morrison because the company had failed to pay any more money, as alleged.

The company's defense was that when the property had been bought it was the understanding that the title was without a flaw.

FEATHERMAN

Our Great July Sale WILL MAKE EVERYBODY HAPPY

Everybody will have a good time! Everybody will find something here that they've wanted, at a price that will make them glad.

This is not a sale of left overs, but of bright, new goods, specially purchased for this event. All the leading Furniture Factories—all the leading Carpet Mills and several large Stove Manufacturers take part in this sale. For months past the buyers for our chain of great stores have been scouring the markets, contracting for solid carloads of goods at a price much below the regular cost, but which the manufacturers were glad to accept to keep their factories running full blast during May, which is usually a quiet month with them. These goods have been distributed amongst our chain of stores and we are ready to throw down the bars and admit you to the greatest feast of bargains for the home that it was ever your good fortune to behold.

Sale will Start at 8 O'clock A. M. Thursday, July 11, and Continue Throughout July

Don't Let Anything Keep You Away on Opening Day

While there will be fresh bargains placed on sale every day, to take the place of goods as they are sold, the very article or articles that you have set your mind on buying may be the first to be sold out, so you'll display wisdom by attending the opening.

Procrastination is the thief of time—Don't procrastinate.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures.

That's our rule and you'll like it. A child can buy with as much certainty of securing a bargain as an experienced shopper. You can wait upon yourself if you want to. The original price tag will remain on every article and the special sale tag will show you what you'll save. Come and see the Tags.

We'll Arrange Terms of Payment to Suit Your Convenience

Just come and profit by this stupendously great money-saving event. We are not going to deny you the pleasure of securing these bargains just because it may be convenient for you to pay ready cash.

This Sale is for all the people and we want you all to come.

The LADY of the MOUNT

by FREDERIC S. ISHAM

AUTHOR OF "THE STROLLER UNDER THE ROSE" ETC.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

Copyright 1912 by THE DODD, MEAD &amp; CO.

"Au revoir, mon pere!" Her voice rose with an odd, unusual thrill. "Au revoir!" she repeated, when a merriness in her eyes suddenly blazed right out of them, and she tightened the reins. Yet hesitating to go, her gaze cleared, and swerving, was abruptly arrested by another and more interested spectator, who, partly concealed by flowers and plants, peered with anxious expectancy from her own balcony, as Nanette's eyes met those of the Governor's daughter, they wavering half guiltily; suddenly became steady, held by something—a flash of impelling intelligence in the other's gaze. A moment or two, my lady continued to regard the girl; then, touching her horse, wheeled sharply, and set a pace downward not easy to follow.

At the base of the Mount they were met by a numerous guard bright in holiday trappings, and, under the gaze of the commandant, with flourish of horse, the party swept gaily from said to shore.

"A gallant company, Monsieur le Commandant!" observed the Marquis to the officer in charge, as they reached the green line at the yellow border's edge. "Now if we were to meet an enemy—"

"Ho would and we prepared, my Lord!" the officer declared.

"True!" And the nobleman complacently touched the jeweled hilt of his own blade, accompanying the action with a tender glance at the Lady Elise.

She, however, a little ahead, appeared not to hear; spoke suddenly to her horse, and, as they swam from the award, started at a brisk gallop down the road. Laughing, the others came after, lords and ladies first; then, with tumult and chatter, the commandant and his men. As they advanced, on either side the way thick trunks of mossy-trown monarchs uplifted their gnarled and hoary branches to meet overhead, through leafy interlattices bright flashes of sunlight shot downward, danced on fine garments and armaments, and then whisked eldly away, in the recesses bushes and sparrowings caws; beyond, murmured streams and rivulets, while at the feet of the riders, gay rooks, flowers nodded, as if in accompaniment to the glad music of the morn.

"Small wonder his Excellency should have destined to this fair prince ably to his own!" muttered the Marquis, looking around. "Of the seven forests of Brittany, none will compare with this, the Desirous woods. What think you, Elise?" spurred his horse near his haunches. "Are you not taken by its beauty?"

She looked at him with a start; then, leaving the saddle she had not spoken, and now, tugging at the reins, only said abruptly: "My saddle! I believe it is loose."

"Loose!" repeated the nobleman. "Careless luckys! Let us see!" And grasping the bridle of his horse, pulled it in his own, and drew both animals to a standstill at the side of the road.

As he dismounted to examine straps and fastenings, the others dashed up; my lady lightly motioned them on. "We'll soon overtake you! Don't wait!" Unquestioningly, they obeyed; though the commandant, to whom a few moments later she delivered a similar injunction, brought his men to a halt and proffered his services. Whereupon the Marquis repeated the words more sharply; redoubled his efforts, wheeled and started to ride.

"I can't find anything wrong here!" panted, the Marquis' strangled.

But her eyes were directed ahead and she pointed with her whip to a score of rough figures who, following the order, so unexpected and startling, sprang simultaneously from neighboring thicket or covert, and advanced to surround them. Held by their grim aspect—the desperate determined visage; the black, threatening looks—in the surprise of the moment, too late my lord's hand sought the sword at his side. Roughly plucked from his horse, he found himself flung to the sword; and unremotely plucked, and heard the voice of my lady, raised in his behalf.

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Marquis Intervenes.

The swaying of the same day, his Excellency, in the seclusion of a small private chamber adjoining the salons du government, stood looking down at his desk on which were strewn papers and messages containing the latest news from Paris and received at the Mount but a few hours before. That the character of this information, political and social, was little to his liking, seemed manifest from his manner; he stared at the missives resentfully; then frowned and threw down the pen he had been using to mark or make-note of their contents.

"Versailles—a mob! Sugar-plums to placate them! Sugar-plums!" he repeated; and, impatiently turning away, walked to the window. There for some time he stood peering out, when the current of his thoughts slowly changed; he took from his pocket a watch, and examined the jeweled face. "Time they were back!" About to return to his table and task, a loud knocking arrested the impulse, and then the Governor called out; glanced toward the threshold and surveyed the intruder.

"A message from the commandant, your Excellency!" said the man, a trooper of the Mount, with a respectful, though nervous salute.

"Why?" returned the Governor in a dry tone, "didn't he bring it himself?"

"Because," the trooper shifted; looked away; "because Monsieur le Commandant is engaged in securing the country for miscreants, your Excellency."

"Miscreants!" sharply. "What miscreants?"

"Monsieur le Commandant hopes to overtake those who have carried off the Lady Elise," said the messenger hurriedly, in the tone of one anxious to be done with his task.

"Carried off!" The thin figure wavered as if struck by a cold breath. "Carried off!" he repeated, laying his hand on the back of the chair.

"By a band of the Black Seigneurs' men! His lordship, the Marquis, they left behind and secured, but the Lady Elise they took with them."

For some time his Excellency said nothing; like a ghost of himself, leaned hard, against his support and looked at that trooper.

"But how could it have happened?" at length in a voice low, intense, he inquired. "Monsieur le Commandant! The guard—you—all are alive!"

Stumbling, as best he could, the soldier explained, and when he had done, his Excellency made no sign that he had heard.

"Monsieur le Commandant further ordered me to say he had no doubt he would return with the Lady Elise," added the messenger hastily.

"They would not dare!" cried my lord with sparkling glance.

But his Excellency shook his head. "No! not! not! And now," again looking away, "leave me, my Lord, in consider!" With which, the interlocutor, unsatisfactory to the one as the other, terminated.
